By AuntMinnie.com staff writers

September 26, 2019 -- Ultrasound technology and subsystems developer Cephasonics has signed a cooperative agreement with BBS Medical in Sweden to develop and market specialized ultrasound probe and transducer adapters.

The devices would allow users to connect different probes from other vendors to Cephasonics systems and provide an array of ultrasound probes and adapters that can be used in research and development.

BBS Medical specializes in developing real-time test systems to verify the performance of ultrasound probes. The company's probe-testing system currently offers approximately 50 different adapters to test all leading brands of ultrasound probes.
